2. Add the following paragraphs below the document.

Hair can protect our heads from light bumps. It also prevents the heat from the sun from making our heads too hot when it is sunny.

Hair stops our body heat from escaping through our heads when it is very cold.

Whether you have short or long hair, you have to get your hair cut regularly because it is growing all the time.

New hair grows from the strands' roots in our skin. It grows about 12 millimeters (0.5 inches per month).

SCORE

1. Start WordPad and open your saved previous activity Hair Matters.
2. Add the paragraph below.

The life of a single strand of hair can last between two to six years, whether we keep our hair short or let it grow long. A couple of months after the old hair has fallen out, a strand of new hair grows in its place. But we will always have a full head of hair because the strands are at different points in their growth cycles.
